Performance Studies.
A new field that’s expanding the concept of theatre and dance.

New York University’s Tisch School of the Arts is defining a new area of scholarship—performance studies.

Research in this new field is expanding the very concept of theatre and dance. It is bringing the social sciences and the arts together.

Performance studies goes beyond dramatic literature, beyond theatre and dance history, beyond familiar forms. It encompasses non-Western, indigenous, folk, and postmodern performance; explores all aspects of performance—from everyday interactions to shamanism, from Broadway to Kabuki, from ballet to burlesque.

Students learn how to document and analyze performances, undertake cross-cultural studies of rituals and festivals, and examine theories of performance ranging from aesthetics to semiotics.

In our M.A. and Ph.D. programs students can also investigate the nature and role of critical writing, intern as a dramaturge, work at the Shubert Archives of Broadway theatre materials, and help edit The Drama Review.

Graduates of the Performance Studies Program are teaching and working professionally throughout the world—in universities, theatres, museums, archives, and publishing. Many have had their dissertations published.

The program offers several areas of concentration: performance theory, dance, contemporary performance, performance writing and dramaturgy, folk performance, and performing arts archives. The faculty includes some of the most highly respected scholars in the field: Brooks McNamara, Richard Schechner, Theodore Hoffman, Michael Kirby, Barbara Kirshenblatt-Gimblett, and Suzanne Youngerman. This resident faculty is joined by such distinguished figures as Victor Turner, Herbert Blau, and Deborah Jowitt.

Information for Authors

Style. Issues of the current volume should be consulted, along with the Manual of Style of the University of Chicago Press. We encourage the use of major subheadings and, where appropriate, second-level subheadings.

Manuscript Preparation. Manuscripts must be typed double-spaced (including abstract, quotations, notes and references cited) one side only on 8½ x 11 noncorrodeable bond, with ample margins for editorial markings (at least one inch on all sides). Do not break words at the ends of lines. Retype any page on which complicated corrections have been made. The original and two copies must be submitted. Author should keep a copy.

Footnotes. Footnotes appear as "Notes" at the end of articles. Authors are advised to include footnote material in the text wherever possible. Notes are to be numbered consecutively throughout the paper and are to be typed on a separate sheet (double-spaced).

References. The list of references which accompanies an article should be limited to, and inclusive of, those publications actually cited in the text. References are not cited in footnotes but carried within the text in parentheses with author's last name, the year of original publication, and page—e.g. (Kroeber 1948:205). Titles and publication information on references appear as "References" at the end of the article and should be listed alphabetically by author and chronologically for each author. Write out the names of journals and other publications in full. Provide complete references following the style of recent issues for form of citation, punctuation, capitalization, use of italics, etc. References cited should be typed on a separate page (double-spaced). References not presented in the style required will be returned to the author for revision.

Tables. All tabular material should be part of a separately numbered series of "Tables." Each table must be typed on a separate sheet and identified by a short descriptive title. Footnotes for tables appear at the bottom of the tables and are marked *, †, ‡, §, ¶, etc., according to standard usage. Marginal notation on manuscript should indicate approximately where tables are to appear.

Figures. All illustrative material, drawings, maps, diagrams, and photographs should be included in a single numbered series and designated "Figures." They must be submitted in a form suitable for publication without redrawing. Drawings should be carefully done with India ink on either hard, white, smooth-surfaced board or good quality tracing paper. Photographs should be glossy prints and should be numbered on the back to key with captions. All figures should be numbered consecutively and all captions should be typed together on a separate sheet of paper (double-spaced). Marginal notations on manuscript should indicate approximately where figures are to appear.

Proofs. Galley proofs or page proofs are sent to authors who are expected to check for typographic mistakes and errors in fact. No part of an article can be rewritten in proofs. Significant new data or an absolutely necessary comment may sometimes be added as a brief footnote. All changes and addenda submitted by the author on his corrected galley proofs are suggestions only and may be disregarded at the discretion of the Editor. The corrected proofs should be returned to the Editor within 48 hours of receipt. It will be impossible to make corrections not promptly received by the Editor.

Reprints. They will be supplied to authors who return with payment by the specified deadline reprint order forms mailed to them along with proofs.
