eighteenth-century European anthropological discourses on the rise of Creole nationalism in late colonial Mexico, with reference not only to Buffonian environmentalism (cf. Antonello Gerbi), but also to political economy, linguistics and aesthetics.

Lesley A. Deacon (University of Texas, Austin) has received an N.E.H. fellowship for a biography of Elsie Clews Parsons (1874-1941), the feminist sociologist anthropologist.

Ludmilla Jordanova (History, University of Essex) is currently working on an article on sex and gender in the human sciences of the Enlightenment, and on a book on the conceptualization of the family during the same period.

David J. Meltzer (Southern Methodist University) is finishing a two year, NSF sponsored archival research project on the history of the human antiquity controversy in North America, 1890-1927.

Nancy Parezo (University of Arizona) has finished a study of women anthropologists who worked in the Southwest, and is working with the University of New Mexico Press to establish a reprint series of anthropological classics in the Southwest, each to have an introductory essay that places the work in the historical context of work in the area.

Mark Solovey (University of Wisconsin) is beginning doctoral research on the federal funding of social science research during the Cold War.

Robert Strikwerda (Indiana University, Kokomo) is researching the Mead/Freeman controversy, examining the philosophical and rhetorical issues in the responses of anthropologists to Freeman.

Pauline Turner Strong (University of Missouri-St. Louis) is conducting research on historical representation during the Columbian Quincentenary, particularly in the United States.

Jack M. Weatherford (Macalester College) has received an N.E.H. fellowship for a study of the intellectual influences of Native Americans on the discipline of anthropology.

BIBLIOGRAPHICA ARCANA

I. Recent Journal Numbers

Abstracts of German Anthropology--Starting with volume 13 (1991), Christian E. Guksch has assumed editorial responsibility for this very useful publication, which will henceforth appear at "regular intervals" (Gottingen: Verlagsbuch-handlung Ramaswamy). The abstracts, which are in English, cover a wide range of German journals and books in socio-cultural anthropology, folklore, developmental studies and related fields. The abstracts are grouped under "General/Theoretical/Historical Studies" and works relating to each of five major continental regions. In addition, there are both author and subject indices. Although the latter does not include "history of anthropology" as such, a perusal of volume 13 indicates a number of relevant entries, which are included in this number under "Suggested by Our Readers," identified by the initials C.E.G.

Bulletin d'information de la SFHSH [Société française pour l'histoire des sciences de l'homme]--Number 4, April 1991, contains a wealth of information, including more meetings, colloquia and seminars than we can possibly list in HAN. Topics range over the human sciences generally, but there are many items relevant to the history of anthropology among the articles, journals, books, collections, reprints, and theses listed (under these subheads) within the general category "Publications." Although some of these are included below (under the initials C.B.), those who wish fuller and regular information may wish to consider subscribing. Inquiries may be directed to Claude Blanckaert, Centre A. Koyré, Muséum national d'Histoire naturelle, Pavillon Chevreul, 57 rue Cuvier, 75231, Paris cedex 05.
