FUNDING OPPORTUNITY

Funding available from the American Philosophical Society

The application deadline for both of these awards is March 1, 2011.

Phillips Fund for Native American Research

The Phillips Fund provides grants for research in Native American linguistics, ethnohistory, and the history of studies of Native Americans, in the continental United States and Canada. The grants are intended for such costs as travel, tapes, films, and consultants' fees but not for the purchase of books or permanent equipment. The committee prefers to support the work of younger scholars who have received the doctorate. Applications are also accepted from graduate students for research on masters theses or doctoral dissertations. The average award is about $2,500; grants do not exceed $3,500. Grants are given for one year following the date of the award.

NEW HISTORICAL RESOURCES

A new online resource is being created for historians of anthropology in Australia, with special emphasis on the network of Baldwin Spencer and F. J. Gillen, whose research was done in the late-nineteenth and early-twentieth centuries. Some features are a bibliography of Spencer and Gillen's works, information about the various Spencer and Gillen collections held in various cultural institutions, and so on.

Information regarding the project can be found here:

<http://spencerandgillen.org>

The National Library of Australia maintains a website that permits access to information about cross-cultural encounters in the Pacific in the latter half of the eighteenth century. Users of the website gain access to such records as indigenous histories:
