

Radcliffe-Brown's antagonist (and Lowie's kindred spirit), Bronislaw Malinowski (Spencer 2000)

Acknowledgements: The letters between Radcliffe-Brown and Lowie are in the Robert H. Lowie Papers in the Bancroft Library of the University of California, Berkeley, and are reproduced with the Bancroft Library's permission. I am grateful especially to William Roberts of the Bancroft Library, and to my colleague Robert Richards for several helpful conversations on the topic of "paradigms," as well as to Bernard Dumbled for research assistance.

SOURCES FOR THE HISTORY OF ANTHROPOLOGY

Pamela Jane Smith, with support from the Wenner-Gren Foundation Oral History Project, has carried on interviews with more than two dozen leading figures in African archaeology from the early 20th century "fathers" (the late Desmond Clark, Thurstan Shaw, and Peter Shinnie) through the intermediate generation of pioneer African Africanists to the present leaders represented by Bayo Folorunso and Innocent Pikirayi. The interviews and transcripts are stored at the Society of Antiquaries of London, Burlington House, Piccadilly, London, WIJ OBE. Four hundred pages of transcripts are also at Cambridge University's Haddon Library. Copies are available from Pamela Jane Smith, Lucy Cavendish College, Cambridge University, Cambridge, England, CB3 0BU (pjs1001@cam.ac.uk)
