

First Hill's Pet Products Dean's Scholar Named

Robin Pullen, a senior student, was named the first Hill's Pet Products Dean's Scholar at the University of Pennsylvania School of Veterinary Medicine.

The scholarship is funded by a $50,000 endowment generated through the Hill's Pet Products College Feeding Program initiated in 1988. Since its inception, this program has raised more than $75,000 from the proceeds of the sale of Hill's Pet Products to students, faculty and staff at Penn's veterinary school. It is expected that funds will be in hand soon for a second Hill's Pet Products Dean's Scholar.

The Dean's Scholar program at the Veterinary School was initiated in 1989 with the goal of establishing a minimum of 100 Dean's Scholars; currently there are 18 such scholarships.

Hill's Pet Products, in addition to enabling Penn to endow a Dean's Scholar, supports a resident in nutrition, funds veterinary dental research, and provides part-time funding for a resident in veterinary dentistry. The company also awarded four annual scholarships to students, and it is a sponsor of the Penn Annual Conference.

Academic Cooperation between School and Japanese Vet School

On the occasion of the centennial celebration of Azabu University in Japan the University of Pennsylvania School of Veterinary Medicine and the School of Veterinary Medicine of Azabu University signed a Memorandum on Academic Cooperation between the two institutions.

Both schools agreed to promote cooperation in the area of research and education and to exchange academic materials, publications and other information. Both schools will promote exchanges between the two faculties and encourage exchanges between students once a year during summer vacation.

A number of Penn's veterinary faculty have traveled to Azabu University to lecture at the veterinary school. Two groups of students from the Japanese School have spent a week each at VHUP to observe the clinics. A third group's visit is planned this summer.

Dr. Darryl Biery and Dr. Charles Newton traveled to Japan to attend the centennial celebrations and to participate in the signing ceremony.

Hip Dysplasia Diagnostic Clinic

The Veterinary Hospital of the University of Pennsylvania offers special appointments Wednesday evenings for radiographic screening of dogs for hip dysplasia. Dogs will be radiographed employing the new diagnostic technique developed by Dr. Gail Smith. This technique measures the laxity of the hip joint and permits the diagnosis of hip dysplasia in dogs as young as four months. An OFA view will also be taken. Litters of puppies should be between the ages of 16 to 20 weeks.

The cost is $150 for an adult dog; $125 for the first puppy of a litter and $65 for each additional puppy in the litter. An appointment is required and can be made by calling 215 898-4680.
